Details

The seminar aims at providing for professional engineers who may be dealing with healthcare engineering and infrastructure projects with knowledge regarding “Planning & Effective Space Utilization in Modern Hospital Design”. Effective planning, space utilization and plantroom spacing in hospitals are considered as the most critical operational mandates. It is driven by among land scarcity, a rapidly ageing population, and extreme patient density. Every square meter in dimension must deliver maximum clinical and operational values. Effective space utilization is a crucial factor to aiding superior MVAC, Building Services Design & Construction, and Related Professionals.

The Speaker

Ms. Vivien Mak began her career at P&T Group in 1997, became Director in 2013 and was promoted to Group Director in 2017. She specializes in the design and execution of medical, healthcare, aged care, community and institutional buildings, and has also been involved in retail, commercial, industrial and housing projects.
