Programme Highlight:

CIBSE initially published COVID-19 Ventilation Guidance on 9th May 2020, followed by latest Version 5 on 16th July 2021 in response to the CIBSE position that there was the potential for airborne aerosol transmission of SARS-CoV-2. This guidance adopts a precautionary approach with the objective of ventilating spaces as much as reasonably possible with outside air as one measure to reduce transmission risk. The objective of the guidance is intended to give business owners and managers an outline of ventilation systems commonly encountered in buildings to assist in the preparation to re-open workplaces and how they can be used to reduce the risks of airborne infection. It will help building managers and those who operate and maintain building systems to identify those areas of a building and elements of ventilation systems that may need particular attention to reduce the risks to the building occupants.

This seminar will discuss the application of local codes compliance setup, standard for healthcare engineering system in private healthcare facilities. The invited topics will also share practical examples with latest engineering solution including operation design, introduction on healthcare day procedure centre.
